On October 6 (October 7 in Australia), 2021, the World Health Organization announced its support of the world's first malaria vaccine. Called Mosquirix, the vaccine was developed by GlaxoSmithKline, a British pharmaceuticals company. The following is a series of Australian covers with privately produced cachets publicizing the vaccine development. Each cover bears an Australian stamp canceled at Haymarket, New South Wales, with a China Town postmark featuring either the Year of the Rat or the Year of the Ox. Covers 1 and 2 have a map of Africa printed on the reverse.
