

MALARIA CONTROL AND SURVEY UNITS

Introduction. On October 9, 1942, The War Department General Staff adopted the Surgeon General's recommendation that malaria units be added to the army medical and sanitation staffs in areas where malaria was a special problem. These units would comprise specialists and support personnel to assess the malaria problem, carry out control measures, train troops in personal protection against malaria, and assist in the control of other insect-borne diseases as needed. When the war ended, 159 control units and 68 survey units had served overseas. These units included approximately 350 officers and 2500 enlisted personnel, as well as thousands of troops and local laborers who assisted the units.

Handbook. The following are covers to and from members of the survey and control units. Numbering for each entry contains the unit number, a C (control) or S (survey), and the APO (Army) or FPO (Navy) number. The description of each cover includes the mailing date and unit location when the cover was posted. APO locations are based on "Numerical Listing of APO'S: January 1942 - November 1947" prepared by the Army Postal Service and Strength Accounting Branches, AGO. FPO locations are based on "World War II Navy Post Office Numbers: WW2 Coded Locations" prepared by Bluejacket.com.

MALARIA CONTROL AND SURVEY UNITS

We take atabrine pills every day to keep the malaria from getting us down. They're not supposed to keep you from getting malaria, but will keep it from showing up on you and making you sick. Then when we go back they're supposed to test our blood and if we have it they're supposed to cure us up - maybe. The mosquitoes aren't too bad here though, but we've been bitten a few times. We have mosquito netting and sleep under it every night. The other night one must have got in with me when I went to bed because he sure as hell chewed on me all night.

sooner. I don't know if I wrote you that I was in the hospital again or not. Well, anyway I was with a fever. It started out at a 102° and stayed at a 103° for the next two nights and then started coming down. They took seven blood smears for malaria but didn't find any malaria parasites. The doc didn't think it was malaria because I didn't have any chills like you usually have with malaria.
